ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

A Crazy Chinaman Attempts to Jump Overboard.

This morning several custom house officials were attracted by the strange actions of a well dressed Chinaman, who was loitering around the water's edge just below their office for a long time. After about an hour two other Chinamen came along, and just as soon as the queer one sighted them he made a break for the water and attempted to jump in, but was stopped by C. J. Miller and a Chinaman before he could do any damage to himself. He was taken to the city lockup, where he was pronounced as being of unsound mind, and booked under that charge. To the jailer he stated that his father was trying to catch and kill him for his money, but that must be a thought of an injured brain, as the unfortunate man only had $1.25 on his person when searched.

IT WILL BE A SUCCESS.

The British Columbia Agricultural Association Hard at Work.

Mr. C. E. Renouf, the energetic secretary of the B. C. Agricultural Association, was met to-day by a TIMES reporter, and in a conversation stated that the forthcoming exhibition, to be held at the grounds on Beacon Hill on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th of October, bid fair to be the best one ever yet given. The present tenants of Agricultural Hall, the men of C Battery, would all be out in about a week, when the association would at once put on a force of men and have the building completely renovated and the grounds put in order, and everything put into first-class condition for the forthcoming show.

The catalogues are nearly ready for publication being almost clear of the printer's hands, and 4000 copies are to be distributed. As many will be mailed as possible to people known, and those who desire can obtain extra copies at Mr. Renouf's, or at Daltry, Ballentyne & Claxton's office. The prize list this year is the most generous yet offered, over $500 having been contributed by the citizens of Victoria, to be given to exhibitors in the shape of cups, etc. It is not intended this year to have horse races a part of the show, as no track is available except the one around Beacon Hill, which is too far from the exhibition grounds. The association does not wish to go against the Jockey Club which is to hold its fall meeting in a few weeks. The committee of management are determined, however, to make the exhibition attractive without races, and there is no doubt but what they will succeed.

TROUBLE BREWING

ARMED FORCES TAKE POSSESSION OF SAN SALVADOR.

President Menendez of San Salvador Poisoned by Wine in Order That General Ezeta Might Secure Control. Nicaragua Costa Rica and Columbia.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—That trouble is brewing among the Central American republics over the proposed confederation, which may result at any moment in war, is manifest from the latest advices received in this city. The jealousy and distrust with which each country views the design of the other, together with other matters, the chief of which is the great disparity in the respective national debts and the local advantages the Nicaragua canal has, combine to raise the bitterest opposition to a scheme which would link together in one national Central American, the Republics of Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua, San Salvador and Guatemala. Among the diplomats here it is talked that instead of drawing to to a peaceful amicable settlement, the imbroglio is daily becoming more implicated.

The story of President Kenendez of San Salvador, is as follows: At the banquet table a small bottle of wine was set apart for the president's use, in fact the guests surrounding him had bottles of a similar character. During the progress of the banquet the president complained of not feeling well, and asked to be excused. He retired to his room, and in a few minutes he was seized with convulsions, frothed at the mouth and turned livid. Medical aid was summoned but without avail. Within three quarters of an hour the lifeless body was all that was left of the president of San Salvador. General Ezeta was at once summoned, and collecting all his available forces, marched to the White House and took possession of the presidency, causing his soldiers and the remaining guests to proclaim him provisional president. The following morning General Ezeta summoned the ministers who were with President Menendez and requested them to remain in office subject to his orders. This the cabinet agreed to do, but within twenty-four hours General Ezetan made himself master of the situation. He disbanded the cabinet and selected new men, known to be opposed to Guatemala's scheme to secure control in San Salvador and who were more in accord with the will of the people at large. As soon as Ezeta formed a new cabinet, he found the Guatemala faction in San Salvador maturing plans for his overthrow. The ringleaders in the plot were summarily dealt with. No less than thirty were shot and forty exiled from the country. The garrisons at the seaports and on the frontiers are being reinforced, and San Salvador may to-day be fairly said to maintain an armed peace. The military, which had been considerably reduced during the Menendez administration, is now being reinforced, everybody being liable to military duty.

Nicaragua, learning of this, became considerably alarmed, and as she desired to avoid bloodshed she consulted with Costa Rica, and efforts are being made on the part of these two republics to induce San Salvador to promise not to lend her aid to any movement toward union that may be accompanied by force. The Nicaraguan canal is playing an important part in the matter. The interests of both Costa Rica and Nicaragua are akin in this enterprise, even were it necessary to use desperate measures to avoid submitting to Guatemala. Both Nicaragua and Costa Rica have an idea in view of entering in a confederation with the United States of Columbia.

The prime outlook of this federation is protection to mutual interests on one side, and the control of the only interoceanic communication on the American continent, on the other. Should this federation take place, the keynote of all transfer American enterprises will be held by the three countries named.

To Protect American Interests.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 11.—The navy department having received information that trouble is imminent between Salvador and Guatemala, has ordered the U.S. steamers Rangers and Thetis to proceed to Central America and look after the protection of American interests.

Old Probs.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—The following is the weather forecast for to-morrow morning for Oregon and Washington: Fair weather except local rains in northern Oregon and Washington.

Father and Sons Killed.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Christian Eckert was killed this morning and his two sons Chester and Frank, aged respectively eighteen and twenty, were seriously injured by an explosion at 119 East 120th street. All three were engaged in the manufacture of soda water at the time. Chester subsequently died from his injuries. Neither of the bodies were slightly bruised. The mother lost her reason on hearing of the accident and disappeared from four other children of the family.

A Big Deal.

CHICAGO, July 11.—The deal was completed this morning by which an immense railroad freight clearing house is to be established on a tract of land southwest of Chicago, owned by President Stickney of the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City road. By an arrangement of tracks proposed, any road can exchange freight with any other road outside the city limits and without any unnecessary switching. The roads which this morning closed the deal by subscribing for stock were: The Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City; Atlantic, Burlington, Wabash, St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Atchison, Northwestern and Wisconsin Central. It is understood the capitalization was for nearly $2,000,000.

Supreme Lodge, K. of P.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 10.—Almost immediately after the opening of this morning's session, the members of the Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias, proceeded to the election of officers with the following result: Supreme Chancellor, G. B. Shaw, Eau Claire, Wis.; Supreme Vice-Chancellor, W. W. Blackwell, Henderson, Ky.; Supreme Prelate, E. J. Blackmere, San Diego, Cala.; Supreme Master of the Exchequer, S. I. Filley, Wilmington, Del.; Supreme Keeper of the Records and Seal, R. T. S. White, Nashville, Tenn.; Supreme Master-at-Arms, G. H. Morrison, Nevada; Supreme Secretary of the Endowment Fund, W. B. Kennedy, Cincinnati, Ohio; Supreme Inner Guard, Dr. D. C. Birkwell, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Supreme Outer Guard, John H. Thompson.

Arrested For Stealing His Own Horse.

MERCED, Cal., July 9.—Ysidore Cruz has complained to the authorities here that J. G. Malcolm had in his possession a horse belonging to Cruz, which he had as security for a small amount of money. Cruz said he was ready to pay the debt, but Malcolm had disappeared, and he wanted Malcolm arrested for embezzlement. In the meantime a letter had been received from Bakersfield by the sheriff, saying that the horse had been stolen there, and giving a description of the thief. Cruz answered to this description, but to make sure he was induced to go to Stockton, where Malcolm had fled, to identify him. At Stockton Cruz was identified as the horsethief and both he and Malcolm were arrested later on a charge of battery for beating a Merced woman.

Sporting in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—The California Athletic Club gave an exhibition this evening, consisting of a light sparring contest, and wrestling. Captain Short, of the police force, was present, but did not interfere with the performances. This was the first exhibition given by the California Club since Chief of Police Crowley recently announced his intention to stop prize-fighting in this city.

San Jose Sheriff Starves Prisoners.

SAN JOSE, Cal., July 9.—The finance committee of the board of supervisors to-day filed a report severely censuring Jonathan Swigert, sheriff for his conduct at the county jail. They find that of the 15 cents per day allowed for the subsistence of each prisoner he has not expended more than one-half, the remainder going to his private purse, and that the prisoners have been ill and insufficiently fed.

DRAGGED THROUGH THE STREET

Three Baptist Ministers the Victims of a Cuban Outrage.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Three Baptist ministers, one of them an American citizen, were dragged through the streets and imprisoned on a false charge by Cuban authorities. This was the news received in this city from Havana to-day. The outrage took place at Guanabacoa; Rev. Albert J. Diaz, general superintendent of the work of the American Baptist Missionary Society in Cuba, accompanied by Rev. Angel Godineza, had gone to Guanabacoa to conduct religious services. The meetings had been held for some time and had been fairly successful, until last Thursday night, when four civil guards entered the house and placed the three preachers under arrest. They were charged with holding meetings in a private house without having secured a license or permit from the authorities as the law required. In spite of their protest, they were dragged through the streets and locked up in prison. They are still treated as common felons. Dr. Diaz is a naturalized American citizen, although he has labored in Cuba twelve years.

A FIENDISH CRIME.

A Fireman Throws the Body of a Child Into a Furnace to Save Funeral Expenses.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., July 11.—A detective from the police headquarters waited in the station of the Delaware, Lackawana & Western railway to-night for the express from Oswego to come in. On its arrival, fireman Fred. V. Curtis was taken off of the cab and to the city jail, charged with the most inhuman crime. His accuser is Frank Granish, a fellow fireman, with whom the prisoner went over the road to-day. Curtis has been brakeman on the road for nine years, but has just been put on an engine to fire under instructions from Granish. This morning Curtis came into the cab with a bundle which he tossed carelessly on the coal in the tender. He said nothing about its contents till the train passed Pleasant Ridge, a lakeside resort near here, when he picked it up and remarked that it contained all that was left of his fourth of July. Curtis left the bundle undisturbed until the train was again full speed, then picked it up and unwinding the paper wrapper opened it in sight of Granish. It held the body of a well developed baby. Curtis said to his astonished companion that it was his own, and that he was going to have a quiet funeral. Without further ado he opened the fire-box, and deliberately threw the body on top of the blazing coals. He said he had frequently done the same thing before. Granish was appalled at the coolness of the man, but Curtis only laughed. When the train returned to the city at noon, Granish gave information of the crime to the police, who made the arrest to-night. Curtis denies the story, but his wife was delivered of a still-born child on Tuesday. The truth is unquestioned by the police. The woman has two children living.

THE WORLD'S NEWS.

MORE ABOUT THE BEHRING SEA DISCUSSION.

A Murderous Parson Wields an Axe. Baptist Ministers Arrested by Cuban Guards.—Cession of Heligoland to Germany.—A London Sensation.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The Tribune's Washington special says: Correspondence between the United States and Great Britain touching the subjects in dispute in Behring Sea, called for under a resolution of the House, will probably be ready for transmission in a day or two. Those who expect to find in the documents referred to any evidence of strained relations which are said to exist at present between the governments of the two countries, will seek in vain. These, on the other hand, who have looked for a firm and dignified insistence upon the rights of the United States in the premises by those charged with so important a trust, will not be disappointed. Negotiations were actively resumed in the latter part of April, and have continued with here and there an interruption ever since then without suspension or abrupt termination. There was at no time the slightest hitch. There is one feature of the negotiation to which attention may profitably be drawn perhaps, since it is likely that official documents will not disclose it. This is a proposition on the part of Sir Julian made about four or six weeks ago to submit certain questions involved in the dispute to arbitration. Mr. Blaine was not unwilling to accede to this proposition, but he wished to define clearly beforehand the facts which should be submitted. Upon this point the negotiators were unable to agree. It was believed that Sir Julian desired power conferred upon the abitrator to decide what were the facts and what were not. In other words he wanted the arbitrator to have an opportunity to go, as if were "behind the returns," but this Mr. Blaine, it is thought, would not agree to, and so the whole proposal fell through. As to who the arbitrator was to be, that was a question not reached, of course, since a basis of the arbitration could not be settled. It is probable, however, that the chief of non-maritime powers, Switzerland, for instance, would have been chosen for the office.

The failure to adopt in the foregoing instance the principle of arbitration, does not preclude the possibility of its being employed ultimately after all. On the contrary, it is believed by those in a position to know that the present drift of the negotiations is still in that direction, and that the arbitration will be found a practical and honorable solution of existing difficulties touching the seal fisheries of Behring Sea.

The Woman Stands the Brunt.

LEIPZIG, July 11.—The trial of the woman Reinhold and her three male companions on the charge of complicity in the anarchists plots which began this morning, ended this afternoon. Mme. Reinhold was convicted and sentenced to six years imprisonment. The three men were acquitted and released.

Wants to be Pardoned.

PARIS, July 11.—Soir asserts that General Boulanger has asked the government to pardon him and permit him to return to France.

A Noble Nurse.

LONDON, July 11.—Among the latest recruits to the corps of skilled nurses, is Lady Alexandria Levison Gower, the only daughter of the Duke of Sutherland, who is so well known in the United States. Her ladyship began her probation to-day at one of the most important hospitals.

Bismarck's View.

BERLIN, July 11.—A Frankfort journal published an interview with Prince Bismarck, in which the ex-Chancellor says had he been in office he wouldn't have signed the Anglo-German Convention in its present form. The Prince remarked that Heligoland might be insured to Germany much more inexpensively than had been the case.

Stanley Under the Weather.

LONDON, July 11.—Stanley is ill and is under the care of his friend and fellow traveler Surgeon Parke and Dr. Wm. G. Hewitt. Miss Dorothy Tennant to whom Stanley is expected to be married is being informed of his condition. Crowds of callers are constantly coming and going in anxious quest of information as to the sick man's condition. Dr. Parke while declaring the illness to be of but temporary duration is still fearful that it may be necessary to postpone the wedding or at least to change the proposed programme of ceremonies.

CESSION OF HELIGOLAND.

The Bill Passes Its Second Reading in the House of Lords.

LONDON, July 11.—In the House of Lords last evening Lord Salisbury moved a second reading of the bill providing for the cession of Heligoland to Germany. Though the island has been serviceable during the war with Napoleon he said it had since been unimportant and was wholly worthless for strategic purposes. He generally believed the importance of the island to England and the magnificent advantages to be derived from its transfer, referring to the African clauses in the Anglo-German agreement. He argued that as long as Wilhelmshaven, the base of another power English interests in the northward could be interfered with. Under the convention there was not the slightest chance for such an interference. Until the conference of Europe were reached he urged that an exclusive English protectorate over Zanzibar would assist in the suppression of the slave trade and develop the commerce of England and India. There was no reason, he said, to apprehend any difficulty over the convention with any European power. It was impossible for England to affect to look up the whole of Africa. He contended that the agreement was mutually advantageous. It would remove all danger of dissension and conflict by cementing good feeling between those who by sympathy and descent ought always to be friends. Earl Kimberley said that in exchange for Heligoland England had got responsibilities of a protection. The Dominion Parliament, he said, ought to have evidence of experts that cession involved no less military or naval advantages, and ought also to know the position of the Government towards the claim of France to the position guaranteeing power and Zanzibar. Lord Salisbury explained that communications were proceeding with France which preclude the present discussion of negotiations with that country. Earl Kimberley thought that Parliament ought not to be required to ratify the cession of Heligoland without the assurance that France would assent to England's protectorate over Zanzibar. The bill then passed its second reading.

A MURDEROUS MINISTER.

A Parson, Crazy With Jealousy, Kills His Rival With an Axe.

BIRMINGHAM, July 11.—At Vendale last night Rev. D. B. Martin, a Methodist preacher, killed Samuel Walker by cutting his head off with an axe. A woman was the cause of the tragedy. Martin was in love with Susan Williams, and had been paying her attentions for some time, which were coldly received. There was a church supper in the village last night, and Martin asked the girl to accompany him there. She refused and accompanied Walker to the festival. The couple had only walked a block when Martin came from up behind them with an axe, and with one blow split Walker's skull open. The girl fell fainting on the ground. The minister has fled and has not been captured.

LADIES ROUGHLY HANDLED.

Countess of Shrewsbury and Mrs. Field Dragged From Their Carriages.

LONDON, July 11.—On Monday night when the Bow street riot was at its height the Countess of Shrewsbury with her escort, Sydney Webb, of New York, left the opera house and entered her brougham to be driven to her residence. The vehicle had made but little progress when it was stopped by a mob and quickly surrounded. Several ruffians wrenched off one of the carriage doors and the others seized the countess and attempted to drag her to the ground and strip the diamonds she wore which were of great value. Webb sprang to the defence of the countess and dealt his assailant a blow. Both he and his companion were rapidly becoming overpowered when they were rescued. Just at the moment when it seemed that the countess would be dragged into the streets, troops of Life guards came dashing against the crowd scattering the rioters in all directions. The soldiers assisted the coachman to replace the broken door of the vehicle and conducted the countess and her escort beyond reach of the crowd. Mrs. Field, of New York, had a similar experience except that her assailants, most of whom were women, stopped her carriage and attacked her with even greater violence than the male rioters visited upon the Countess of Shrewsbury. Mrs. Field was also rescued by the soldiers before the theft of her jewels, the object of the attack upon her, could be accomplished.

BY JULES VERNE.

J. T. Maston would not listen to any one. He resisted the begging and tears of Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt. He went out of the house where he had kept himself in hiding. He was recognised, and those who had trembled for fear of the consequences of his work now took revenge by joking and laughing at him, and this in many thousand different ways. He was forced to listen to jeering remarks, even from the street gamins. "Ah!" they shouted, "here he is who wanted to change the axis of the earth, who wanted to discover coal mines around the North Pole, and even wanted to remove it." In short, the secretary of the gun club was compelled to return to the mansion of Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt, who used all her wealth of tenderness to console him. It was in vain, however. J. T. Maston could not be consoled, as his cannon had produced upon the earth's sphere no more effect than a simple popgun would have done. A fortnight went on in this way, and the world resumed its daily routine and did not even think any longer of the projects of the N. P. P. A.

A fortnight and no news yet from President Barbicane and Captain Nicholl. Had they perished by the disaster in the land of Wamasai? Had they sacrificed their lives in the most mysterious operation of modern times? No.

After the detonation both were overthrown along with the Sultan and his court and a thousand natives in one grand tumble, but they all got up after a little time strong and hearty.

"Did you succeed?" asked Bali-Bali, rubbing his shoulder.

"Do you doubt it?"

"Me doubt it?"

"But when will you know it?"

"In a few days," said Barbicane.

Did he appreciate that the operation had failed? Perhaps. But he never would have acknowledged it before the Sultan at Wamasai.

Forty-eight hours later the two partners had taken leave of Wamasai, not, however, before having paid an enormous sum for the damage done to the country. As this amount of money went into the private purse of the Sultan, and as his subjects did not receive one cent of it, he had no reason to complain of the operation.

Then the two associates, followed by their ten helpers, reached Zanzibar, where they found a vessel to take them to Suez. From there under false names the steamer Morris brought them to Marseilles; then they took the train to Paris, where they arrived without having had any collision or accident, and taking the railroad to Havre they arrived in time to go to America by the Bourgogne, of the Transatlantic line. In twenty-two days they made the trip from Wamasai to New York, and on the 15th day of October the two knocked at the door of the mansion of New Park at three minutes past noon. An instant afterwards they found themselves in the presence of Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt and J. T. Maston.

CHAPTER XX.

IN WHICH THIS STORY, AS TRUTHFUL AS IT IS IMPROBABLE, IS FINISHED.

"Barbicane! Nicholl!"

"Maston!"

"You!"

"We!"

And in this plural pronoun, uttered simultaneously by the two associates in a single voice, might be heard a flood of irony and reproaches.

J. T. Maston pressed his iron hook on his forehead. Then, with a voice which seemed to stick in his throat, he said:

"Did your shaft at Kilimanjaro really have a diameter of twenty-seven meters?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did your projectile really weigh 180,300,000 of kilograms?"

"Yes."

"And was the shooting really done with 2,000 pounds of meli-melonite?"

"Yes."

This thrice-repeated "yes" fell on J. T. Maston like masses of stone on his head.

"Then I can only conclude—" said he.

"What?" asked President Barbicane.

"As follows," said J. T. Maston. "As the operation did not succeed, the powder did not give to the projectile an initial velocity of 2,800 kilometers."

"Really?" said Captain Nicholl, with a tone of sarcasm.

"Yes, your meli-melonite is good only to charge pistols of straw."

Captain Nicholl sprang up at this remark, which was an outrageous insult to him.

"Maston!" said he.

"Nicholl!"

"You ought to be blown up with the meli-melonite."

"No, gun cotton; that is more sure."

Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt had to interfere and cool these two enraged gunners down.

"Gentlemen," said she, between the associates.

"And anyhow," President Barbicane resumed, with a very calm expression, what is the good of criminations? It is as certain that the calculations of our friend, J. T. Maston, were correct, as it is certain that the explosive of our friend Nicholl had sufficient power. You have only employed known quantities of science. We lacked experience. Why did we fail? Perhaps we may never know."

"Well," said the secretary of the gun club, "we will commence all over again."

"And the money then which has been spent for this operation is a dead loss," observed Captain Nicholl.

"But public opinion," said Evangelina Scorbitt, "would not allow you a second trial." "What will become of our Arctic region?" said Captain Nicholl. "Where will the stock of the N. P. P. A. fall to?" said President Barbicane. Well, it had already fallen so far that the stock was offered at the price of old paper.

This, then, was the result of the gigantic operation. This was the memorable fiasco to which the superhuman projects of Barbicane & Co. had led.

If ever engineers, unlucky engineers, were laughed at in public, if ever the newspapers made drawings, songs and paragraphs not at all flattering to the people mentioned in them, this occasion exceeded them all. President Barbicane, the directors of the new society and their associates of the gun club were universally sneered at. In every language they were made ridiculous, and to make it easier for the whole population of the world to read, the scornful articles were printed in "volapuk." In Europe especially remarks and songs to make the persons of the N. P. P. A. ridiculous were spread broadcast. The greatest hit was made by a Frenchman, who composed a ballad which was sung in every concert hall of France and America. But will we never know to what the failure of this enterprise was due? Did this failure prove that the operation was impossible of realization; that the powers at the disposal of mankind would never be sufficient to bring about a change in the earth's movement? Did it prove that the country around the North Pole would never be removed to those regions where the sun and heat would melt the ice without human help?

Information on this subject came a few days after the return of President Barbicane and Captain Nicholl to the United States. A very simple paragraph appeared in the Times of October 17. Here is the article:

"We all know that the result of the operation to create a new axis has been nothing. However, the calculations of J. T. Maston, founded on established facts, would have produced the desired result if through an unexplainable slip an error had not been embraced in them from the beginning. When the celebrated secretary of the gun club took for a basis of his calculations the circumference of the earth's sphere he figured it at 40,000 meters in place of 40,000,000 meters, and to which the failing of the operation is due.

"Where could such an error come from? Who could have provoked it? How could such a remarkable calculator commit such an error?

"It is certain that had the problem of the modification of the earth's axis been correctly figured it would have been exactly solved. But this forgetting of three zeros has made a change at the end of the calculation of twelve naughts.

"It is not a cannon one million times larger than that of twenty-seven centimeters which was necessary. A trillion of these cannons throwing a trillion projectiles of 80,000 tons each would be necessary to displace the North Pole, admitting the meli-melonite had the expansive power which had been attributed to it by Captain Nicholl.

"Therefore the whole shock under the conditions under which it was produced has displaced the North Pole only three-thousandths of a millimeter, and has only changed the level of the ocean at the most nine thousandths of three thousandths of a millimeter. In regard to the projectile fired, it will be a small planet, and will belong in future to the solar system, sustained by solar attraction. ALCIDE PIERDEUX."

So this want of attention on the part of J. T. Maston at the beginning of his calculations had produced such a humiliating result for his company.

But even if his associates were very angry against him, if every body laughed and joked at him, it is only fair to state in his favor that this mistake which had wrecked the operation had spared the world a terrible catastrophe.

A flood of telegrams and letters arrived from all parts of the world congratulating J. T. Maston on his mistake of three naughts. J. T. Maston, more downhearted and crushed than ever, would not listen to the hurrahs which the world now uttered for him. President Barbicane, Captain Nicholl, Tom Hunter, with wooden legs; Colonel Bloomsberry, the gay Bilsby and his associates would never pardon him. But Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt could not be angry with him, most excellent lady.

J. T. Maston had begun to do his calculations over again, refusing to admit that he was wrong at that point.

He was, however; the engineer, Alcide Pierdeux, had not made a mistake. Having learned his error at the last moment, when he had no time to make it known, he had remained perfectly composed among all the fright and terror of those about him. That was why he proposed a toast in champagne at the moment when the shooting was taking place in the Old World.

Yes, indeed, three naughts had been forgotten in the circumference of the earth. Suddenly J. T. Maston remembered the whole matter.

It was at the beginning of his work when he had shut himself up in the Ballistic Cottage and written the number 40,000,000 on his blackboard. At that moment the electric bell began to ring with great force. J. T. Maston went to the 'phone. He exchanged a few words with Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt. Suddenly a terrible stroke of lightning from the storm through the telephone knocked over his blackboard and himself. He got up, commenced to write over again the numbers which had been half rubbed out on his blackboard. He had just written the numbers 40,000 when the telephone rang for the second time. He went again to listen to Mme. Scorbitt, and when he did begin his work he forgot to put on the last three naughts of the earth's circumference.

What a terrible blow it was to this unhappy lady when J. T. Maston was compelled to tell her the circumstances which had produced the mistake! Yes, she was the cause of the disaster. It was on her account that J. T. Maston found himself dishonored through the long years which he had yet to live, as nearly every member of the gun club usually lived to the age of a hundred years.

After this conversation at New Park J. T. Maston had gone away from the mansion. He went back to his Ballistic Cottage and walked in to his study muttering to himself: "Well, now I am not good for any thing any more in this world."

"Not even good enough to get married?" said a broken voice at his elbow. It was that of Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt. Absolutely crushed and broken-hearted she had followed him.

NOT EVEN GOOD ENOUGH TO GET MARRIED.

"Dear Maston"—she began.

"Well, yes," said he, "but only under one condition—that I shall never make any mathematical calculations."

"My dear friend, I have a horror of them," answered the excellent widow.

Thus it happened that the secretary of the gun club made Mrs. Evangelina Scorbitt Mrs. J. T. Maston.

In regard to the article of Alcide Pierdeux, we might say that it brought him into great celebrity and reputation.

It was translated into all languages, printed in every paper, and thus his name became known all over the world. The father of his old sweetheart had refused him his daughter's hand, after telling him that he could not give him his daughter, as he was too smart. But now, after having read this article, and being able to understand it without any help, he began to feel sorry and know better. He sent him an invitation to dine with him and his daughter.

CHAPTER XXI.

VERY SHORT, SINCE ENOUGH HAS BEEN SAID TO MAKE THE WORLD'S POPULATION FEEL PERFECTLY SURE AGAIN.

And now the inhabitants of the world could again be perfectly easy. President Barbicane and Captain Nicholl will not again begin that enterprise so woefully miscarried. J. T. Maston will not again figure out any calculations, however free from mistakes. The article of Alcide Pierdeux has told the truth. What the law of mechanics proves to us is that to produce a displacement of the axis of 23 degrees and 28 minutes, even with the meli-melonite, a trillion cannons similar to the one which had been bored into the cliff of Kilimanjaro would be necessary. But our whole sphere, bored over its whole surface, is too small to accommodate them. Therefore the inhabitants of the earth may sleep in peace. To modify the conditions in which the earth is moving is beyond the efforts of humanity. It is not meet that mere humanity should change any thing in the order established by our Creator in the system of the universe.

A BICYCLE RAILROAD.

A Unique Proposal for Connecting Two New Jersey Towns.

Something entirely unique in the construction of railroads is about to be put into practical operation between two New Jersey towns, says an American exchange. The motive power costs nothing. There are no engines, firemen, brakemen, or conductors to be employed, and every passenger runs his own train to suit himself. The new system is a bicycle railroad. It is to run from Mt. Holly to Smithville in a direct line over fields, roads, creeks, a distance of two miles. It is to be completed in about two months, and when completed will look just like a fence with an inverted bicycle running on top it. Each passenger has the exclusive use of one of these bicycles for the trip and can whiz along the rail at the rate of a mile in two minutes. The run from one town to another can easily be made in five minutes. The railroad requires for its use a special form of bicycle, although the ordinary saddle, handle-bar, and propelling machinery are employed. An

is that the bicycles cannot jump the track, and that anyone can ride them without any previous experience or skill in the art. The track being elevated is adapted to use in all seasons of the year. The machines will be provided with head and rear lights for night use. The track is built by bedding cross ties three by six by three and a half feet long in the ground once in six feet, and erecting upon them a post and rail structure about three and a half feet high, of dressed yellow-pine lumber. This post is secured to the cross-ties by means of bolts and angle-irons. Narrow wooden stringer pieces connect the posts and the top stringer piece has a T shaped rail screwed upon it on which the bicycle runs. In the upper part of the frame are two grooved wheels which run one in advance of the other on the single track rail. The is between the wheels so that the rider is carried above the trackway and astride the track-supporting structure. The handle-bar is located in front of the rider in the usual manner, so that, while not required for balancing or steering, serves to steady the rider and to assist when propelling rapidly. The frame is made double. It extends downward below the track-rail on opposite sides of the track structure about two and a half feet, and has at the lower end small guide wheels running horizontally on opposite sides of the lower string-piece of the trackway to keep the machine in an upright position. The driving-wheel in front of the rider is about twenty inches in diameter and is connected with a ratchet and chain to the propelling treadles.

Saved By a Pass.

During the reign of the James boys in Missouri it was observed that the trains of the Hannibal and St. Joe were never molested by the James boys or their banditti. Trains on every other road near Kearney or Kansas City were periodically robbed.

The St. Joe road seemed to be invariably protected from their visits, says The Denver News. It was all due to an annual pass. One day while in the office of the general superintendent of the road at Hannibal a News reporter saw a list of persons to whom annual passes were issued. Among the number was the name of Mrs. Samuels, of Kearney, Mo. This station is a primitive settlement of houses that resemble matchboxes whitewashed. The place is known in history, however, as the home of Jessie and Frank James, the famous outlaws.

"How is that?" was asked of the superintendent in astonishment, when it was recalled that Mrs. Samuels was none other than the one armed stepmother of the noted train robbers.

"My dear boy," responded the railroad official with a suave smile and an exuberant twirl of his massive watch chain, "that annual pass saves the St. Joe road thousands of dollars and our trains, as you know, are never molested. We have carried her for years and will continue to do so as long as we turn a wheel. She has the only life pass on the road."

Not long afterward, when Frank James was pardoned and walked around Kansas City in the last stages of consumption, he was asked about the little incident and responded feelingly:

"We never boarded a St. Joe train just on that account. The kindness shown our crippled mother and the refusal of the road to run a special train of Pinkerton men to surprise us touched the hearts of both Jessie and myself. That is why we never bothered that road."

Jubbas of the Chas.

"Hello!" said the quad, as the compo threw him in; "you're a hard looking case, did you know it?"

"No wonder," grunted the case; "I've been on the rack so long."

"You seem to be out of form, too," remarked a thin space, from its box.

"What if I am! Lead me alone!" snarled the quad.

"You're getting saucy," put in a hyphen, as it came along. "Thinking of the galley left behind him, I suppose!" at which the other types giggled.

"I'll be dashed!" cried the unlucky quad. "If you'd been locked up as long as I have"—

"I was just going to ask quad the matter was," inquired the period. "I thought perhaps you needed quoin."

"Stop!" said the exasperated quad. "I've comma long way and I won't be insulted this way."

Things began to look squally, when the compositor shook up the case and made them all behave.—Lawrence American.

Unfortunate Marston.

The late Westland Marston is said to have been about the most unfortunate man of letters that ever lived in England. Misfortune pursued him throughout his life. He wrote poetry that was above the public, and prose that was too good for them. His plays were persistent failures. Endowed with great gifts and abilities he was hardly able to earn a poor living. In his domestic life he suffered bereavement after bereavement. His wife, his children, his grandchildren and his son-in-law successively died, leaving him solitary, the last of his unhappy race. He bore his afflictions with patience, but accepted death as a happy release. Who, under similar circumstances, would not?—Pittsburg Bulletin.

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price 50c. for small or $1 for large size bottles by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont. daw

CHINESE RETALIATION.

TSUI KWO KIN, Chinese Minister to United States, Spain and Portugal, is credited with having said to a New York World reporter that "Unless the United States Government repeals the law which now excludes his countrymen from this country we shall treat the Americans to a dose of their own medicine." It will strike most people that language such as this is excessively undiplomatic, that above all things, whatever might be uppermost in the Chinese Minister's mind, he would scarcely unbosom himself to a member of the press.

Reputable American organs, however, affect to regard the statement as official, among which is the Oregonian, a paper not usually far astray in its treatment of matters and things. The Oregonian, however, has never been a very strong anti-Chinese organ, and hence in its remarks on the exclusion of Americans from Chinese territory the wish may be father to the thought. The mere exclusion of Americans from China would not be a serious matter. What the Oregonian professes to fear is, that the Americans will forfeit the right to participate in the development of China's internal industries, namely, the building of railways, the opening of mines, the establishing of manufactures and the creating of internal commerce generally. This would be a sad blow to the Americans, indeed. If it should so come about that China offered no inducements to a future race of HUNTINGTON'S and GOULD'S civilization, and America in particular would suffer.

It seems to us a poor, uncharitable philosophy that would barter away the rights of labor in America that some few hundred American citizens should be given an opportunity to plunder the Chinese exchequer. Labor is required to stand a good deal that capital shall have a chance, but to ask labor in America to compete against a hundred million Chinese slaves in the interest of a few American speculators is just pressing the limit of the law of self preservation. Aside from the fact that such a deal would not be a square one, we are not so sure that it is to China's interest to accept it. A few Huntingtons and Goulds in China, and we would not give a copper for the reigning dynasty. They would overturn the whole business. We should not have an Emperor HUNTINGTON or an Emperor GOULD—the Americans are too modest for that—but they would set up some legislative dummies, and pull the wires quite as effectually as would be possible for a crowned head. If the Chinese Government at any time has ever contemplated the employment of Americans to assist in the development of the latent resources of the country it was unconsciously nursing a viper which would wreak its destruction. The Chinese Government, in fact, instead of regretting that it must exclude Americans from its hospitable shores, should thank its "Joss" that the opportunity is afforded to refuse them an asylum. We cannot say that we are admirers of the Chinese polity, but as between hide-bound conservatism and a gang of Huntingtons and Goulds, we infinitely prefer the former.

To pursue the foregoing subject a little more seriously, we cannot help expressing surprise that any paper, however actively pro-Chinese, the Colonist for example, should be able to find in the Chinese Government's alleged intention to retaliate against the United States, the text for a sermon in condemnation of the "Exclusion Act." The course of the Colonist in the matter is, however, quite consistent. If for two years past that organ has uttered a solitary anti-Chinese sentiment it has escaped our observation. And we may add in connection with the Colonist's extraordinary attitude, that as that paper shouts so does the Government. The Honorable JOHN ABBOTT and his colleagues are anti-Chinese in the abstract, only. However, we need not address ourselves to these small fry. They are powerless for harm. We shall only say that he who could regard with equanimity the influx of Chinese on these shores has no moral qualities worth speaking of. We should dislike to be regarded as wanting in human sympathy, but charity begins at home; the line must be drawn when the integrity of our own flesh and blood is being put in jeopardy. But what astonishes us most is, that the Oregonian, which in an editorial article some months ago, conceeded the ability of the Chinese to freeze out competing peoples in the labor markets of the world, should find anything to deplore in the exclusion of the Chinese myriads. If there is such a thing as the "curse of cheapness," and we have eminent authority that there is, (Lord ROSEBERY) that alone, viewed as a purely material proposition, is sufficient to show that labor should be protected. And it is getting to be a tolerably prominent fact that if labor cannot obtain from their representatives the protection they require they will protect themselves. All this broadcast philanthropy urged conjointly by sentimentalists and capitalists in the interest of scrub nations is in the language Truthful JAMES, "played out!" There isn't a dollar in it except for the capitalists. Not until our already congested labor market is relieved of its load have we any moral or material right to consider an arrangement with China, which will admit of her spreading her pauper hordes over the North American continent.

HYPNOTISM.

Those who have read DUMAS' "Memories of a Physician" will remember that the leading character is a hypnotiser, and that though at a distance, he makes his influence felt on the ladies of the court. Of course, all this, though circumstantially described, was, and probably is to-day regarded the license of the novelist, that is to say has no scientific value. That, however, DUMAS in his story anticipated practical hypnotism, the experience of the present amply corroborates, and indeed we have a parallel case save that the parties interested are simple folk in no manner connected with the pomp and heraldry of power. HENRY TRANER has lost all individuality, all will power. For twenty-five years he has been a devoted husband and father, but, having a few weeks since fallen under the influence of MRS. SCHRALLY, she has become the moving force of his life. MR. TRANER, fully alive to the dreadful situation in which he was placed, made clean breast of it to his wife, and persuaded her to lock him up in a room on one occasion, in order that he would be unable to reciprocate the behests of MRS. SCHRALLY. The remedy of forced duress, however, proved worse than the disease. MR. TRANER'S sufferings were so intense, that his wife released him and he sped away to the presence of the hypnotist like a crazy man. In the case of ERNEST HANSFELTER, we have the hypnotic power exemplified as wonderfully, and as unfortunately, in relation to the peace of the domestic circle. MR. HANSFELTER is the victim of one JOSEPHINE SCHMIDT. This lady has compelled MR. HANSFELTER to abandon his family and follow her. The third case is that of a millionaire contractor who, suffering from an acute kidney disease sought the services of ANNIE HEFNER, a specialist. This doctor is 28 years old and good looking. Her dark blue eyes so thrilled LEPMAN that he became a well man in three months after the beautiful specialist turned her attentions upon him. He continued to visit her, however, on pretence of further medical advice, till the fair physicians husband grew suspicious. But why dwell on the sequel. Let it suffice that MR. HEFNER has brought an action against the contractor for $25,000. It may be worth while to treat hypnotism of this kind seriously, but we think not. MRS. SCHRALLY, the hypnotiser of MR. TRANER, is described as a tall, handsome woman of thirty-three. We are not informed as to JOSEPHINE SCHMIDT'S personal appearance, but we may presume that she is fair to look upon. Until some woman ugly, scrawny and fifty seduces a man from his family, reduces him to a pliant tool in her hands, we shall be squeamish of accepting hypnotic cases of the kind described as bona fide.

MR. CARNEGIE AND FREE TRADE.

In the North American Review for July, Mr. ANDREW CARNEGIE sums up the tariff discussion as left by GLADSTONE and BLAINE, and finds that:

"Given a world within itself, with every requisite for manufacturing the various commodities required by its people, was it wise to give the necessary concessions and bounties to induce skill and capital to establish manufactures within this world? and, if it were found that the easiest and surest mode of building up manufactures was by taxing the manufactures of other nations, so that the product of experimental factories in the undeveloped land should be shielded from the competition of fully developed factories abroad, should this protection have been given or not, and should it be maintained as far as may be found necessary? How interesting it would be to have Mr. GLADSTONE'S answer to this problem—the only one which our country has to consider."

This is the gist of Mr. CARNEGIE'S argument, reinforced by excerpts from speeches of sundry prominent Americans, and Mr. LABOUCHERE, who is noted as saying, "As I am an Englishman I am in favor of free trade; but if I was an American I would be in favor of protection." Mr. CARNEGIE admits that free trade is best for England, but he denies that what is good for England is also good for the United States. Mr. CARNEGIE, however, fails to show that the cost of protection has been commensurate with results. He, indeed, makes an effort to show that manufactures have created a demand for home products which would not otherwise have been the case, but the grand question, namely, whether this demand has proved most advantageous to manufactures or to consumers, he leaves in a state of blissful uncertainty. There is such a thing as purchasing certain advantages at too high a cost. If we compare the financial condition of manufacturers to that of the farmers, we cannot but conclude that the former have benefitted at the expense of the latter. Protection has made the manufacturer rich while the consumer has steadily grown poorer and poorer. In the matter of protection vs. wages, Mr. CARNEGIE does not make a fair illustration. Instead of comparing the wages of railway men in the United States with those of the same class in England, why did he not compare the wages of mill operatives in the respective countries? Why did he not show us the difference in wages between the employees of protected vs. unprotected industries. The comparison of wages submitted by Mr. CARNEGIE is disingenuous. It has no relevancy to the question at issue. If Mr. CARNEGIE had offered a comparison between the wages of iron workers of the respective countries, we should then have been given an idea of the benefits conferred by protection upon labor. Mr. CARNEGIE makes a most plausible defence for free trade in the United States, and he gets in some neat strokes on England's policy. At the best, he only succeeds in showing that free trade is of vital importance to England, whereas to the United States it is not.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Out of a possible attendance of about 550, the average attendance of the House of Lords has dwindled down to less than a hundred. To correct this abuse one of the members suggests that only those who are regular in attendance be allowed to vote. It is only when reform measures threaten their prerogatives that the peers turn out in full force to balk the popular will.

The capture of a rich banker by banditti, who exacted a ransom of $100,000 for his release, has caused the Italian Government to display a little energy in the pursuit and punishment of the bloodthirsty miscreants. The leader of a band captured near Frosinone has a record of forty-two murders to answer for. One would naturally suppose that, with the vast number of troops at its command, the Government would be able to suppress brigandage.

During the present week the Irish Police Bill will provoke an animated discussion in the House of Commons. The practice of shadowing prominent Nationalists will give the Parnellites an opportunity to roundly assail BALFOUR'S methods. He recently asserted that only a dozen men in the Green Isle were shadowed, but the Parnellites claim to be in possession of proof that in one province alone nearly thrice that number were scheduled for shadowing.

The Victoria Chinese Exclusion Act, which was first enforced in the latter part of 1888, has had the effect of checking the Mongolian invasion, the arrivals last year numbering only 175, fully nine-tenths of this number returning to the colony, consequently the law did not apply to them. The arrivals for the first quarter of the present year were only thirty-six males and one female. It is now announced that the Attorney-General may visit England to conduct the appeal before the Privy Council, the Supreme Court's recent decision on the Chinese question having been against the Government.

The following letter to the Board of Education, Vancouver, from Hon. JOHN ROBSON, is published in the minutes of proceedings, by the Telegram. It is as follows:

DEAR SIR.—Replying to yours of the 21st instant, having reference to school sites, I beg to say that it is my intention to see Mr. Van Horne; but, should I not be able to meet him, I hope the School Board will meet him, as it is quite evident there is no use in trying to deal with Mr. Browning. Yours truly, JOHN ROBSON.

P. S.—By the way, Vancouver has now a live representative in Mr. Cotton, who will, doubtless, be able to accomplish the desires of the constituency. J. R.

A man occupying the position of Leader of the Government, most people will think, ought to be above uttering a contemptible sneer at the representative of any constituency, more especially when, as in this case, the representative has no connection with the subject matter of the communication. Mr. Cotton is the choice of the people of Vancouver by an overwhelming majority. As a "live representative" he may be "able to accomplish the desires of the constituency" if the Government of which JOHN ROBSON is the head is not completely blinded by petty vindictiveness. As an independent representative, Mr. COTTON may accomplish a great deal, but to "accomplish the desires of his constituency," with Mr. ROBSON as Premier will very likely be impossible. And it was to emphasize this fact, doubtless, that Mr. ROBSON so far forgot himself as to introduce into an official letter a reference which, under any circumstances, was a piece of vulgar impertinence.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Ruling Senate established by PETER I in 1711 is one of the great colleges or boards of government that administer the affairs of Russia. The Senate's functions are partly of a deliberative and partly of an executive character. To be valid a law must be promulgated by it. It is also the high court of justice for the empire. According to a recent decision of this tribunal the wives of such exiles to Siberia as have served their time but have not been restored to their civil rights, may travel or live wherever they please without the consent of their husbands, and may even get married. The experience of political offenders in Russia is indeed a bitter one.

The report that France desired to establish a protectorate over Siam is followed by a cablegram intimating that England, having absorbed Burmah, is now getting up a frontier dispute with Siam, which would make a desirable addition to British Further India. But a short time ago the French Embassador proposed to Lord Salisbury that an imaginary line be drawn down the middle of Siam, and that the country to the west of that should be considered the spere of British interests and that to the east the spere of French interests. The King, CHULALONKORN I, is a man of progressive ideas, a fact shown by his steam yachts in the river at Baukok, the Departments of Education and Posts and Telegraphs, the repeating rifles of his soldiers, the scarlet lancers and brass bands. The office of Second King has been abolished and he is now meditating a scheme of constitutional government. At present his word is absolute law. His revenue is estimated at £2,000,000.

Bullet Proof Shirts.

Sporting men and detectives are now wearing the steel shirt, and considering that it is light, flexible, bullet and knife proof, we should suppose that it might come into use in the army. A representative of a New York journal had an interview with the proprietor of a steel shirt to this effect:

The gambler led the way into a private room. There, lying on the table was the defence against lead and steel—rattling musically against each other as he allowed the folds to softly slip through his hands. A careful examination showed each link to be as fine as the head of an ordinary pin. The whole shirt was flexible, and could almost be concealed in one hand. Each link was welded to the next one and all were composed of the finest steel.

"You see," said the gambler, going to a drawer and extracting a garment, "this is a chamois-skin vest made to go next to the skin. Over this the armor is worn and then your ordinary garments are placed above. It doesn't impede a man's motions in the slightest and the links are so fine that no rattling can be heard, notwithstanding the motions made by the body. It cost me $250 and it is worth every cent I paid."

Further investigation showed that the armor was serviceable. The gambler, spreading the article on the table, took a long dirk from a drawer, and raising the knife to the height of his arm, brought it down with all his force on the tiny links. The point of the knife snapped off cleanly, and a minute examination of the shirt could not discover a single dent. The rosewood table bore just a scratch, evidently owing to a movement of the shirt when struck.

In view of the improved methods of killing men which have come in vogue of late years, the man who can furnish a cheap steel bullet-proof shirt, will become as valuable a citizen as the inventor of the Gatling gun. Should such a shirt be invented, men, instead of shooting at each other would have to club their muskets.

It would be well for the War-office authorities to see to the proper supply of horses for the army. The number of these animals at present in possession of the Government is a little over 13,000. Deducting from this number 20 per cent. as too young, too old, or sick or lame, there does not remain a sufficient number to meet the war demands of one army corps and quite 12,000 under the number required for two army corps. This does not allow for the horses needed to maintain lines of communication in war time, and the total deficiency for two army corps is not less than 18,000 horses, to say nothing of the animals required to meet the waste of a campaign, which in the Crimea amounted to 80 per cent. It seems strange that in a country like ours very little is done by government to encourage the breed of horses for military purposes. Whenever a crisis comes, one of the most extravagant items is that for the hurried supply of horses, many of which are soon found to be unsuitable.

A Woman's Presence of Mind.

Mrs. Richard Barker, of Swansea, Mass., secured a servant from a Boston intelligence office, and everything went well for a week. One day the girl was working about as usual, and Mrs. Barker, who is a slight, frail woman, was alone with her. Suddenly the servant threw up both hands and exclaimed: "I have had a vision, and am ordered to offer up a sacrifice." Without any further explanation she started into the kitchen, seized a carving knife and began diligently to whet it in true Shylock fashion, muttering to herself strangely all the time.

Mrs. Barker saw that she was at the mercy of a crazy woman, and for a second or two fright almost overcame her. She knew that she would be no match for the servant in a struggle. Moreover, if she attempted to make her escape she felt that the knife sharpening would come to an end and the attack would commence. It was at this point that Mrs. Barker displayed unusual nerve and wit. Acting on the principle that it is often well to humor the insane as far as possible, she threw up her hands, and, imitating the servant's manner, said: "I, too, have had a vision. There is a letter for you at the postoffice, and you must go for it at once." The servant, pleased to discover her mistress a kindred spirit, dropped the knife and rushed out of the door, bareheaded, in great haste to get possession of that imaginary letter. Mrs. Barker bolted the door against the girl, but the latter had escaped by train to Boston before she could be caught.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CHINESE BANKING.

Borrowing Money Under a System Called the "Woo-ey."

The Chinese have a way of borrowing and lending money under a system that they call a Woo-ey, that allows its members to borrow in a stated sum and repay it by installments. Any member of a Woo-ey who takes a share and does not wish to borrow himself obtains a good plan of a Woo-ey is as follows: Ah Sing wants to borrow $100 and repay it in installments, so he starts a Woo-ey; his first step is to find 20 persons who are willing to take a $5 share in a $100 Woo-ey. Ah Sing is known as the Woo-ey Tow, or head of the Woo-ey; the shareholders are known as Woo-ey Chi, or children of the Woo-ey. The Woo-ey lasts for 20 months; each Woo-ey Chi pays in $5 to the Woo-ey Tow, so that Ah Sing obtains his $100. At the end of the month Ah Sing goes to each of the shareholders and asks for bids for the next loan; each member writes his name and the amount of interest he is willing to pay on a slip of paper. Every member has the right of borrowing money once during the Woo-ey. After the bids are all received they are opened and read and the money lent to the highest bidder. We will suppose that 2 per cent is the highest bid. Ah Sing, who now pays the first installment, has to pay in the full amount of $5, while the others deduct the 2 per cent. and pay in $4.90. When the next installment falls due thre are two members who have to pay in the full amount, and so the Woo-ey runs on. At the end of 15 or 16 months the interest offered is often as high as 25 or 30 per cent., but as 15 of the members have borrowed and so have to pay in the full amount of $5, it is only the four or five left who get the benefit of the heavy interest. Sometimes toward the last of the Woo-ey, when two or three different ones wish to borrow, the rates offered are often as high as 75 per cent., and in one instance 100 per cent. was bid on a $5 Woo-ey. As there were three members that had not borrowed, the Celestial had only to pay the heavy premium to two men. Sometimes the Woo-ey is as low as 50 cents a share, and I have known of Woo-eys as high as $50 a share.—N. Y. Herald.

Jack Tar in Church.

One of the old sailors on the receiving ship Wabash tells the following story about a chum of his: "Jim, here, was drifting along by a church one quiet Sunday, and desiring to keep up an acquaintance with his early boyhood friend, he dropped in to hear the 'sky pilot' spout. He hadn't done a great deal of snoozin' for twenty-four hours before that, and it was not long before he was asleep, and dreaming. He was at sea, in his dreams aloft. Presently the preacher talked louder and louder. He was describing the end of the world. 'The end has come!' he cried, striking the pulpit with his fist. The words aroused Jim, who started up and shouted: 'Then make a knot, you lubber; make a knot!' The parson afterward accepted Jim's apology for the interruption."—Ocean.

"For Rent."

Says a La Salle street agent: "I am going to make an innovation which I think renters will appreciate. I am going to have all the houses and flats for which I am agent photographed. These photographs will be in my office. They will give the applicant some sort of an idea of the premises before he goes to make an investigation. Wherever I have a house or flat for rent I will arrange to have the key to the premises convenient and will pay the man who keeps the key a percentage of the first month's rent to answer all questions regarding the premises. A man who rents a house to live in has some rights. The time is about at hand when the unaccommodating landlord who cares for nothing but his rental will have to adopt some other business. The old fashioned house and flat must give way pretty soon. There is too much in the way of modern improvements for the old style houses."—Chicago Tribune.

The Use of Arsenic.

A woman of ordinary intelligence ought to know without being told that arsenical toilet preparations are dangerous to the health, and yet not a week passes that I am not in receipt of [illegible] of them showing thought and ability, asking me to recommend some cosmetic for the elimination of [illegible] requesting to be told [illegible] as safe for an internal medicine as it is for a complexion wash. These correspondents know that arsenic is a deadly poison, and yet they talk about its use as if it were the simplest and safest drug in the world. Arsenical doses will put an end to pimples, and, what is more, an end to the life of the person using them.—Eleanor Kirk in Atlanta Constitution.

ADDITIONAL EXTRACTS FROM EXPLORER STANLEY'S BOOK.

The Horrors of Bassnya—Thrilling Scene of Savage Marital Love—The Meeting With Emin—How Discipline Was Enforced—End of the Awful Tramp.

From the start the author reports desertions, thefts, and sale of arms and ammunition, and stories of hunger, disease and starvation soon follow. The peculiar feature of African travel—the country without roads, boats, pack animals, farms, game, or anything else that makes travelers sure of progress and having life sustained, are vividly described in every chapter, until the reader wonders how any of the expedition survived. Men would steal a gun and sell it to the natives for a morsel of meat, until the rule was made that death should be the penalty of theft. One man was hanged; another stood with a noose about his neck and many were at the other end of the rope ready to drag the wretch to eternity. Then the leader "set up a game" to see whether his brutish followers might not have some humanity and loyalty in them. He had previously arranged that one of the head men should beg for the culprit's life. Here is his description of what followed:—

"Now, my man, have you anything to say to us before you join your brother who died yesterday?"

The man remained silent and scarcely seemed conscious that I spoke. Then I turned round to the head man. "Have you anything to say before I pass the word?"

Then Rashid nudged his brother chiefs, at which they all rushed up and threw themselves at my feet, pleading forgiveness, blaming in harsh terms the thieves and murderers, but vowing that their behavior in future would be better if mercy was extended for this one time.

During this scene the Zanzibaris' faces were worth observing. How the eyes dilated and the lips closed, and their cheeks became pallid, as with the speed of an electric flash the same emotion moved them!

"Enough children! take your man, his life is yours. But see to it. There is only one law in future for him who robs us of a rifle, and that is death by the cord."

Then such a manifestation of feeling occurred that I was amazed—real big tears rolled down many a face, while every eye was suffused and enlarged with his passionate emotions. Caps and turbans were tossed into the air. Rifles were lifted, and every right arm was up as they exclaimed: "Until the white cap is buried none shall leave him! Death to him who leaves Bula Matari! Show the way to the Nyanza! Lead on, now—now we will follow!

THE INNER MAN.

There is but little description of slave-catchers and their methods, but it is enough to show what a hell Central Africa must remain until the slave trade is suppressed. Much of the suffering of the expedition might have been averted had not the natives suspected the party of being slavers and killed every one who attempted to find food. Unable to obtain supplies by trade the men stole fruit, grain and animals. That some who sought for food were themselves killed and eaten did not detain others from straying from the column, impelled by their inner cravings. Discipline was hard to maintain, treachery was to be feared. Says the author:—

"The more experience and insight I obtain into human nature the more convinced do I become that the greater portion of a man is purely animal. Fully and regularly fed he is a being capable of being coaxed or coerced to exertion of any kind, love and fear sway him easily, he is not averse to labor however severe; but when starved it is well to keep in mind the motto 'Cave Canem,' for a starving lion over a raw morsel of beef is not so ferocious or so ready to take offence. Rigid discipline, daily burdens and endless marching into regions of which they were perfectly ignorant never seemed to gall our men much when their stomachs were pampered and abundant provender for their digestive organs was provided; but even hanging unto death was only a temporary damper to their inclination to excessive mischief when pinched with hunger."

STANLEY'S BAD HEALTH.

When returning to learn the fate of Emin at one time desperate. "I had had no meat of any kind, of bird, or beast, for many a month," he writes, "subsisting entirely on bananas or plantains, which, however varied in their treatment by the cook, failing to satisfy the jaded stomach." His muscles had become thin and flabby and were cords and sinews; "every limb was in a tremor while traveling, and the vitals seemed to groan in anguish for a small morsel of meat." Even his servants were alarmed for his fate. He overheard his tent boy say to another native of Zanzibar that he did not believe the master would last long, as his strength "was declining fast."

In the same paragraph in which he describes the state of his health, Stanley complains of the ground as being "rank with vegetable corruption, the atmosphere heated, stifling, dark and pregnant with the seeds of decay of myriads of insects, leaves, plants, twigs and branches." Moreover, at every pace his head, neck, arms or clothes "was caught by a tough creeper, calamus thorn, coarse brier, or a giant thistle-like plant, scratching and rending whatever portion they hooked on," while insects also of numberless species lent their aid to increase my misery, especially the polished black ant, which affects the trumpet tree. As we marched under the leaves these ants countrived to drop on the person; and their bite was more restless than a wasp's or red ant's; the part bitten soon swelled largely, and became white and blistery."

OUT OF THE WOODS.

The end of the awful tramp in the forest came at last.

"Then we halted on the crest of a commanding hill to drink the beauty of a scene to which we knew no rival, which had been the subject of our thoughts and dreams for months, and now we were made glad according to the days wherein we had been afflicted and the period wherein we had seen evil.' Every face gloated over the beauty of the landscape, and reflected the secret pleasure of the heart. The men were radiant with the fulfilment of dear desire. Distrust and sullenness were now utterly banished. We were like men out of durance and the dungeon, free and unfettered, having exchanged foulness and damp for sweetness and purity, darkness and gloom for divine light and wholesome air. Our eyes followed the obscure track, roved over the pasture hillocks, great and small, every bokkey islet and swarded level around it, along the irregularities of the forest line that rose darkly funereal behind us, advancing here, receding there, yonder assuming a bay-like canoe, here a cape-like point. The mind grasped the minutest peculiarity around as quick as vision, to cling to it for many years. A score of years hence, if we live so long, let but allusion be made to this happy hour when every soul trembled with joy, and praise rose spontaneously on every lip, and we shall be able to map the whole with precision and fidelity."

ANIMAL LIFE.

Of the multitudinous animal life of the forest he writes:

"Many people have already questioned me respecting the game in the forest. Elephant, buffalo, wild pig, bush antelopes, coneys, gazelles, chimpanzees, baboons, monkeys of all kinds, squirrels, civets, wild cats, genets, zebras—ichneumons, large rodents, are among the few we know to exist within the woods. The branches swarm with birds and bats, the air is alive with their sailing and soaring forms, the river teems with fish and bivalves, oysters and clams; there are a few crocodiles and hippopotame also.

"As for birds, they made clatter enough overhead, but we were in the basement and they were on the roof of a fifteen-storey house. They could not be seen at all, though their whistlings, warblings, screamings and hootings were heard everywhere. There were parrots, ibis, touracos, paroquets, sunbirds, swifts, flashers, shrikes, whip-poorwills, hoopoes, owls, guinea fowls, blackbirds, weavers, kingfishers, divers, fish eagles, kites, wagtails, bee eaters, pipits, sandpipers, cockatoos, hornbills, jays, barbets, woodpeckers, pigeons and unknown minute tribes, and millions of large and small bats.

"Insects would require a whole book. Never have I seen such countless armies and species during my various marches through the forest. I should consider it infra dig to refer to these minute creatures after the lavish abuse I, in common with others of the expedition, have bestowed on them. I recollect but few hours of daylight that I did not express myself unkindly toward them. The bees, large and small, the wasps, the hordes of moths by night, the house flies, tsetse, gadflies, gnats and butterflies by day, the giant beetles, attracted by the light in the tent, sailing through the darkness and dashing frantically against the canvas, rebounding in their rage from side to side, and all the time hoarsely booming, finally with roars of fury dashing themselves against my face or book as though they would wreak vengeance on me for some reason; then the swarms of ants peering into my plate, intruding into washy soup, crawling over my bananas, the crickets that sprang like demons and fixed themselves in my scalp or on my forehead; the shrill cicada that drove one mad, worse than the peppo-inspired Manyuema women. The Pasha professes to love these tribes, and I confess I have done as much mischief to them as possible.

"But if we were bitten and stung by pismires and numberless tribes of insects by day, which everyone will confess is as bad as being whipped by nettles, the night had also its alarms, terrors and anxieties. In the dead of night when the entire caravan was wrapped in slumber, a series of explosions would wake everyone. Some tree or another was nightly struck by lightning, and there was a danger that half the camp might be mangled by the fall of one; the sound of the branches during a storm was like the roar of breakers or the rolling of a surge on shore."

EMIN'S WELCOME.

The meeting with Emin is described in the quiet manner which Stanley always uses at climaxes where almost any other man would be tempted to drop into fine writing:—

"At eight o'clock amid great rejoicing and after repeated salutes from rifles, Emin Pasha himself walked into camp accompanied by Captain Casati and Mr. Jephson and one of the Pasha's officers. I shook hands with all and asked which was Emin Pasha? Then one rather small, slight figure, wearing glasses, arrested my attention by saying in excellent English: 'I owe you a thousand thanks, Mr. Stanley; I really do not know how to express my thanks to you.'

"'Ah, you are Emin Pasha. Do not mention thanks, but come in and sit down. It is so dark out here we cannot see one another.'

"At the door of the tent we sat and a wax candle threw light upon the scene. I expected to see a tall, thin, military-looking figure, in faded Egyptian uniform, but instead of it I saw a small, spare figure, in a well-kept fez and a clean suit of snowy cotton drilling, well ironed and of perfect fit. A dark, grizzled beard boarded a face of a Magyar cast, though a pair of spectacles lent it somewhat an Italian or Spanish appearance. There was not a trace on it of ill-health or anxiety; it rather indicated good condition of body and peace of mind."

OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

NEW TARIFF AS PROPOSED BY THE MCKINLEY BILL.

Mr. McKinley Goes Mr. Foster One Better—British Columbia's Excessive Loyalty—The Farmers the Miners and the the Fishermen Pay the Bill.

From our own Correspondent.]

OTTAWA, Ont., July 3.—If there is any province in the Dominion which would be benefitted more than another by reciprocity with the United States, it is British Columbia. I have on many occasions given TIMES readers reasons why this is the case, although it is no doubt equally apparent to themselves, living as they do in close proximity to the neighboring republic. Dust, however is thrown in their eyes by the organs of the high protection party so that their masters may reap part of the proceeds of the farmer, the miner, the mechanic and laborer. Although British Columbia representatives in the House of Commons have time and again voted that it was to the benefit of the province to "clap on full sail" as Sir Leonard Tilley used to say, in the way of taxation, it does not by any means follow that the great mass of the people there are in favor of paying more for the necessaries of life than they would have to do had we a reciprocity treaty with the United States. People of Victoria can scarcely be thought to concur with Col. Prior, M. P., when he stood up and voted in the House that they were anxious for an additional tax on their imported beef. This is a direct point where it cannot be discussed that the consumers do not pay the duty, although there are occasions when the manufacturer, to get a market for his wares, is compelled to do so. No one pretends that British Columbia raises a surplus of meat, not even sufficient for its own necessities so that it is compulsory for the people if they are to obtain that essential commodity to import it from the United States. Increase the duty then and you directly increase the price, because the manufacturer has no necessity to cut prices to get his goods sold in Canada.

TOO MUCH APATHY.

Here in the East the opinion prevails strongly, and not without just cause, that there is such a apathy of things political in the west that there is no desire on the part of the people there that there should be any improvement, that their affairs should be better attended to in Parliament, but on the contrary, that they will submit to whatever is desirable on the part of any of the other province, say Quebec, no matter how injuriously it might affect their own province. The sealing vessels may be captured at free will by Yankee pirates in the open sea, and no protest is forthcoming. In their sweet innocence they are satisfied to learn, and have been so for the past number of years, that "negotiations with the home office is progressing satisfactorily." An extra embargo is placed between themselves and the people they trade with, and they declare all is lovely. "Long live the King." The necessities of life and the implements of the farmer are taxed to the mast head, and the same meek and loyal cry is heard. A portion of the taxes on the tools of the miner is removed and again it is "Long live the King." Had they been increased there is not the slightest doubt but a similar answer would be forthcoming. To one who has not studiously watched political events as shown, first by the representatives of the people, and secondly by the people who chose these representatives, this might appear to be somewhat exaggerated, but nevertheless it is.

LITERALLY A FACT.

Gather up thy manhood, British Columbia, assert thy independence, agitate for thy rights, cease doing homage to any party, call it by whatever name you like, and your people will obtain that consideration to which you are entitled to. Take a leaf out of the programme of Manitoba, whose people will burst railway monopolies or oust Governments, who will have railways subsidized even if the proposed route should be to the moon, as many are apt to say of the Hudson Bay road. The Northwest will have their just claims or go into rebellion; the Nova Scotians, who deny they are Canadians, will either have their pound of flesh or set upon their own account; Prince Edward Island sent a whole phalanx of Government members to Parliament to terrorize the Government or get their demands; Peter Mitchell will bulldoze the Administration to such an extent that they will require to attend to New Brunswick. Quebec—it would be ridiculous to say anything about Quebec. British Columbia alone is the province without a grievance

RETALIATION.

But I have somewhat digressed from the question of reciprocity between ourselves and our neighbors. Take a glance along with me at some of the provisions of the McKinley Bill, and you will see at a glance what this so-called protective tariff is likely to bring us. Mr. McKinley is no greater fool than Mr. Foster, and both can play the same game. Read the following table and then say if the new order of things—for the McKinley Bill will certainly become law—will not have a marked effect on our exports:—

It is all very good for the monopolists, who like cormorants suck the last drop of blood out of the farmers, miners and fishermen, to tell them to enshroud themselve in the Union Jack, and live in the past glories thereof, lest it should be in any way tarished by freer intercourse with the United States, but a free, independent and intelligent people will scarcely be carried away by such buncomb. In the year 1888 there were exported from the Dominion to the United States horses to the value of $2,402,370; cattle, $648,178; sheep, $1,027,410; eggs, $1,119,582; barley, $6,489,317; potatoes, $957,370, and hay, $800,622. The new American tariff will destroy all this trade. Take eggs alone, and the duty, based on the figures of 1888, means $707,380, and so on all through the list. If this does not make our farmers loyal, they ought to be.

SLABTOWN.

Tramway Notes.

The rails for the Esquimalt addition have been laid from the car house to the end of Point Ellice bridge and before many weeks the people of Victoria West and Esquimalt will be brought into easy reach of the city.

The additions to the engine room and car house is being pushed to completion.

Don't Want Them.

Mayor Grant has received a telegram from Mayor Moran of Seattle stating that the two Caffire boys, one of whom recently broke from the reformatory, are held at Seattle awaiting word from Victoria. Mayor Moran asks what shall be done with them. The telegram has been turned over to Supt. Sheppard, who states that he doesn't want the boys back.

The Turkish Baths.

It seems a pity that some enterprising person with cash enough to help him along could not be found to take up the building and fitting out of the Turkish baths, which a few weeks ago were assured to the citizens. Unfortunately a disagreement has arisen between Messrs. Gray & Ralff, owing, Mr. Gray says, to the latter's failure to put up his share of the cash to make a completion of the business. Considerable work was done toward getting the baths started, a brick plunge was built, and the lumber hauled to the ground, but further work was stopped, and now the realization is as far off as ever. If some one with capital would take the scheme up where it now lies there is no doubt but what a paying investment would be made.

The Latest Issue.

To-day's issue of the WEEKLY TIMES consists as usual of 16 pages of bright readable matter. The news of the week, the continuation of the Rocky Mountain Club's experiences, some additional chapters of Jules Verne's eccentric story "Topsy Turvy," and a most interesting article about H. M. Stanley's new book "Darkest Africa," issued in London last week, are among the features of this week's paper. No family in British Columbia should be without the TIMES. If you are not a subscriber, send in your name and begin now, and when you have read the paper send it to some friend abroad that the wonderful resources of our province may be made know the world over.

Bennet-Visich.

The TIMES has much pleasure in recording the marriage of one of Kamloops' most popular young men, Mr. J. S. Bennet, to Miss Louisa Visich, which took place at Kamloops on Tuesday, the 8th inst. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. Fraser of Victoria, at the residence of Mr. James McArthur. The bride was supported by Miss Mary Cameron of Kamloops, and Mr. Frank A. Bennet of this city acted as "best man" for his brother, the groom. After the ceremony the guests to the number of about 30 sat down to a splendid supper provided by Mr. McArthur. Ample justice having been done to the good things, Mr. D. Wilson, Inspector of Schools, proposed the health of the newly married couple in a neat and witty speech, which was drunk with enthusiasm, and briefly replied to by the groom. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents from their friends who will wish them a long and happy wedded life together.

Furious Driving Expensive—Should Have Been Cruelty to Animals.

On Sunday last a party of three in a buggy at Beacon Hill amused themselves by turning the track into a race course. This morning in the police court Joseph Carteledge, on remand, was charged with furious driving and pleaded guilty. His honor asked the particulars of the case, and officer Levin, who had been an eye witness, stated that the accused and two others were in a buggy on Beacon Hill on Sunday afternoon and driving at a very high rate of speed around the track, endangering the lives of people thereby. Officer Levin further stated that one of the occupants of the buggy, all of whom were drunk, stood up and lashed the horse terribly. Had it been possible to prove which of the three did it, a charge of cruelty to animals would have been laid.

The accused asked Officer Levin if he, the officer, was at the Hill on Sunday.

Officer Levin proved conclusively that he was there in private clothes, as was the Superintendent and one other constable, but all were some distance away at the time and could not overtake the team.

Superintendent Sheppard corroborated this, and said that in spite of the assertion that no police were there, no less than three were on the grounds, but like other mortals police are not omnipresent, and they did not happen to be close to the track at the time the offence was committed.

The accused stated that he had asked several people, and they all said that no police were present, but the officers who were there are of the opinion that Carteledge and his companions were too drunk at the time to see an officer.

His honor imposed a fine of $10, thus emphasizing Supt. Shepherd's assertion that "this sort of thing has got to stop."

Sir John's Facility of Expression.

Before a successor to General Middleton is appointed it will be as well to promote the legislation suggested by Mr. Mulock in the last session of Parliament, removing the stipulation that the head of the militia of Canada must be an imperial officer. He should be a Canadian. An officer trained in Canada, with a perfect knowledge of the feelings of Canadians, would best superintend this branch of the public service. Besides, public honors and emoluments are none too good for Canadians. As Sir John Macdonald said during the first "N.P." election, "We must keep our ain fish guts for ain sea mews."

Name-Calling.

When a British Tory editor means to write crushingly of a Liberal he speaks of him as a "Separatist." In Canada, when the Tory editor undertakes to say the worst he can of an opponent he dubs him an "Annexationist." Either term is misapplied, but that is of little moment to those who use them. Mr. Gladstone is no more a "Separatist," in the sense intended to be conveyed by his traducers, than is Lord Salisbury or Mr. Balfour; and Hon. Wilfrid Laurier is really more loyal to Canada and Canadian interests than nine-tenths of the Tories in the House of Commons. The man who stands on the side of right and of fair play to all classes is far more worthy of respect, esteem and support than is the man who is devoted to the interest of a special class, and that class the monopolists nurtured under a policy of over-taxation that is especially oppressive to a country like Canada.

Look out for Your Ashes.

It would appear that the cause of the accident on board the City of Paris was the breaking of the propeller shaft, which caused a sudden increase in the velocity of the engines, leading to a general smash-up. The breaking of the shaft was due to its having ground away the lignum vitæ, and ultimately the steel in the strut supporting it. It then was out of a straight line and in consequence of this broke by the strains brought about by its own revolution. The cause of the action is, therefore, to be traced to the grinding away of the lignum vitæ of the bearing. One theory is that the liner on the propeller shaft being too tightly shrunk on, split, thus leaving a large edge to grind away the lignum vitæ. Another is that the ashes which are discharged below water on the same side as the broken shaft were continually carried to the propeller bearings as the ship was going through the water, and that they were the original cause of the accident.—Nautical Magazine.

Change in Engineers.

Ought to be Asphalt.

A new sidewalk is being laid on the south side of Broad street from Yates street to Spencer's block. The improvement is a good one, but it would have been infinitely better had the walk been laid in asphalt, then there would be no future trouble with rotting planks and obtrusive spike heads.

Resident Consular Agent.

Mr. W. B. Dennison, Nanaimo agent of the C.P.R. and connecting steamship lines, has received the appointment from the Hon. Levi W. Myers, U. S. consul for British Columbia, of resident consular agent at Nanaimo. Mr. Dennison is well and favorably known throughout the province and will no doubt make a good representative of the stars and stripes.

Missed His Game.

A telegram was received at the police headquarters at Nanaimo yesterday from Chief Sheppard of Victoria, instructing the officials there to arrest a woman on board the steamer City of Topeka, who was suspected of stealing a watch and chain in this city yesterday. Before the constable could reach Departure Bay the steamer had left again for the north and the woman is now free as far as the Victoria police are concerned.—Free Press.

Third Batson Song Recital.

Tickets will be only 50 cents. Two hundred and fifty tickets have been placed on sale at Waitt's and 250 seats will positively be provided. As only a limited number of tickets will be sold, those who are wise will secure tickets at once and enjoy the treat of a lifetime, by hearing the greatest colored singer in the world in this her last concert in our city.

Forester's Banquet.

The semi-annual election and installation of the office bearers of Court Northern Light, A. O. F., took place at their hall last evening, after which the brethren adjourned to the Lorne restaurant and sat down to a table loaded with good things. The retiring Chief Ranger, H. A. Lavin, occupied the chair, and after the inner man had been satisfied, song and story whiled away a few pleasant hours. The following are the officers elected:

C. R., F. Hinds; S.C. R., Bro. Wilkes; Treasurer, Bro. Phillips; Secretary, H. L. Salmon; S. W., Wm. Nicholas; J. W., S. S. Lehman; S. B., J. Malcolm; J. B., J. Barron; medical officer, G. L. Milne.

The Orangemen.

To-morrow the Orangemen all over the world will celebrate the 200th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, which was fought on the banks of the Boyne July 12, 1690, and when the combined forces of England and Holland under William I. defeated the Irish Catholic forces under James II. This defeat of the Catholics gave the Protestants a firmer hold in England, and consequently they celebrate the day as one on which they won a great victory. The B.C. contingent will assemble at Westminster to celebrate the day, and Victoria Orangemen and their friends go up by the Rithet at 7 o'clock to-morrow morning, returning in the evening.

SAMPLE OF "NEWS."

Go From Home to Hear Home Happenings—Who Wrote the Letter?

The following dispatch was received to-day in the regular telegraph report, and is a fair sample of what is circulated in the American press concerning the sealing business here:

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—By a private letter received in the city yesterday from Victoria, the recent dispatches concerning the warlike attitude of Victorians towards the Behring Sea cutters, sent out from this port, are in a manner confirmed. The letter says: "A general opinion prevails here that two fleet sailing crafts have been fitted out, armed and equipped and sent to Behring Sea to aid the British sealing vessels to resist seizure by the American revenue cutters. Most of the British sealers, it is generally understood, have armed their crews, and are evidently prepared to give the cutters a brush this season." From the same source it is learned that Capt. Hooper of the Corwin does not share the general belief, but on the contrary entertains no fear whatever of any belligerent action on the part of the sealers. The Corwin is at Victoria waiting her sailing orders. It is thought she will soon proceed to Behring Sea.

[It is a well-known fact that no swift schooners are being, or have been fitted out here with arms to resist the revenue cutters. The assertion in the dispatch that the Corwin is at Victoria is on a par with the rest of the falsehood.—ED.]

The cars were hauled back to the car house by a team of horses, and the operation proved to all who witnessed it the great difference between the old and the new systems of street transportation.

Kissing in the Park.

A young Englishman, who is well connected and is on a visit to Montreal, appeared before the Recorder privately, charged with kissing in the Park a young lady who is well connected. The young man was also accused of assaulting the police on the previous night. He admitted that he had kissed the young lady in the park, but in extenuation of the act said he was engaged to her, and that he was an Englishman, and that such things were customary in the parks of London. The young man was fined $15, and the young lady, who was too much prostrated to be present, and preferred rather to receive the sentence than make a defence, was fined $10.

B. C. Board of Trade.

The annual meeting of the British Columbia Board of Trade was held in the Board room, Bank of B. C., this afternoon with President Ward in the chair and Messrs. Fell, Helsterman, Beeton, Redon, Bourchier, Ellis, Hall, Higgins, D. R. Kerr, Flummerfelt, and Harris present.

Communications were read from a Scotch woollen company asking for particulars as to what inducements would be offered to them to start a mill in Victoria. Referred to new council.

From Jas. L. Raymur, applying for the position of secretary vice Mr. Monteith, resigned, was also referred to the new council.

The annual report was then read, but up to the time of going to press it had not been disposed of.

A Coincidence.

It is a fact not generally known in Victoria that the suave and popular Mr. Bergen, manager for Miss Flora Batson, is that estimable lady's husband. The interesting ceremony at the close of Tuesday evening's concert would have been even more interesting had the audience known that a white man was marrying a colored lady, at the close of a concert given by a colored lady wedded to a white man, both of them present on the platform. Aside from her wonderful musical talent, Miss Batson has many amiable qualities, and various accomplishments, and a charming manner, only acquired by extensive travel and association with cultured people. She will leave Victoria, where she has spent several pleasant weeks, almost immediately after her song recital Monday night.

Rastus in Earnest.

Mr. Erastus Wiman was interviewed by the New York Tribune the other day with reference to La Patrie's suggestion that he should be made leader of the Liberal party in this country. He said that the party was not in need of a leader from outside, that he could serve it better in New York than at Ottawa, and that his business interests would not permit his extended absence from the former city. "He did intend, however," he said, "to take an active part in the impending campaign, which would extend over so vast an area. He proposed to deny himself a vacation this year, in the expectation of affording two vacations in the summer of next year during the Canadian elections; and it was his intention to enter Canada at Windsor, opposite Detroit, and speak for sixty days, twice a day, coming out at Montreal."

CAMERON'S

BID FOR BUSINESS,

ARE YOU WILLING to be convinced that you may be wasting money? Or are you like the old lady who was willing to be convinced, but would like to see the person who could convince her?

TO PAY THE PRICES others ask is simply rank nonsense. It is paying a premium to greediness and emptying your purse to fill pockets bulging with plunder.

THAT OTHER ASK two prices is no reason why you should pay more than one or that you should suppose that the two-price piratical profit plan is associated with every business.

WHEN YOU CAN come into our store, handle our goods, compare them in price and quality, and prove to your own satisfaction that we are living up to our claim of low-price dealing, why don't you come?

GET LOWER PRICES and save money. That's the idea. You can get them. If no other store offers them our store does. Our war cry is "low prices." That's our bid for business.

AT OUR STORE you will find as choice a display as you ever looked on. Nothing that belongs to a fine stock is missing—except the usual exorbitant prices. Our prices are very low.
